

(22.3) Why is Np assumed to move faster than Pu in most groundwaters?

Answer: At oxidizing or weakly reducing conditions, Np will be present as  $\text{NpO}_2^+$  whereas Pu will be present as Pu(IV) in various hydrolysed forms. Pu(IV) is much stronger sorbed than Np(V).